info

The University of Palermo (UNIPA), established in 1806 by Ferdinand III of Bourbon, is to date one of the largest universities in Italy and indeed the largest in Sicily.

Palermo, the ancient capital of Sicily, well known for its sea, rich in precious monumental art treasures and the mild climate, favours an intense cultural and artistic life. A natural bridge between Europe and the Mediterranean countries, linked to them by ship, plane, train, it provides motivation and growth opportunities for young people.

and events

The University of Palermo is a place of study and research, but also a place for the promotion and realization of events organized in synergy with all the institutional, cultural and religious realities. The University of Palermo, with more than 200 years of history, is the centre of dialogue and confrontation, as well as the connecting element for the territory. The event programming aims to emphasize the crucial value of the University not only for the economy of the city, but also for its multi-ethnic and multicultural soul.
