

The Law Department of the University of Palermo (DIGI) has won a national competition launched by the Italian Ministry for Education, University and Research (MIUR) aimed at identifying a number of Excellent Departments in Italy.

Consequently, the DIGI has produced a five-year programme that includes the introduction of a postgraduate degree in Migrations, Rights, Integration.

The conference here presented will be the inaugural event of the new course of study.

We are inviting some of the Europe's leading experts in migration studies in order to challenge the current categories usually applied to the phenomena, perception and governance of migration.

Failure of the prevailing approach to effectively tackle the main issues of migration leads to the need for a revised course of action in this sector.

Mobility has always been a common treat in human history, but the freedom of movement is unfairly enjoyed by individuals in different parts of the world. Furthermore, the current legal and political framework on international mobility and citizenship poses a serious threat to the fundamental rights of the individuals.

Wayfarer citizens aims to bring together mental and creative energies to develop a new geopolitical and legal paradigm for human mobility based on the dignity of human beings.
