What is PROVIDE?

PROVIDE (PROximity on Violence: Defence and Equity) is a project financed by the European Commission whose main aim is to contrast violence against refugee/asylum seekers - women, men and sexual minorities (LGBT), children and elders - by strengthening networking activities and specific competences in different professional fields.

The consortium includes Partners from 3 European countries (Italy, Spain and France) and will develop a protocol containing a training methodology with operational guidelines targeting all professionals (in particular social workers, health professionals, law enforcement staff) that are more likely to encounter victims of gender-based violence on the territory.

The protocol will be the result of a pilot experimentation of the training method in Sicily, Lombardy, Tuscany and Paris Region. All project results will be available in English, as the main objective is to adapt the project's results at a national level and also in other European countries facing the same phenomena.

Expected results

- To increase the emergence of the problem of proximity gender-based violence against migrant/refugee.
- Development of shared language to the recognition and reaction of professionals when facing migrant/refugee victims of proximity gender-based violence.
- Improved knowledge and specific competences of professionals, enabled to recognize and react to signs of physical or psychological abuse on migrant and asylum seekers.
- Increased cooperation among European partnership and integration of practices among professionals of migrant reception centers, prefectures and hospitals.
- Integrated a protocol available for replication and transfer, built upon prior learning and expertise and subsequently combined with innovative models and techniques.

Project image

The four hands united strongly, forming a circle, symbolizing the coordination and union between participants in the project with a common goal: the protection and defense of the different groups to which the project is directed. The central symbol is a person (without distinction of gender or race) with arms raised (joy, triumph), which is the center of our project.

The project image claim:

- Project an attractive, current, efficient and sustainable image of the project.
- Remove the idea of the project from negative connotations or stereotypes associated with drama.
- Transmit the possibilities of improvement and prevention in the face of adverse situations; main objective of the PROVIDE project.

The logo can be presented in different formats to be used in official documents, brochures and posters, and envelopes or letter.

The colors used are:

Green: sustainability, nature, ecology.

Blue: health, tranquility, security.

Both are degraded to join in the center symbolizing the integration of these concepts in the results of the project.

Website

Parallel to the project, a website dedicated to the dissemination of the actions carried out has been created. In it, the PROVIDE project is presented in a general way; as well as the participants of the different countries, the activities carried out and the materials that have been used.

Universidad de Jaén

Campus Las Lagunillas SN, Jaén -
23071 Spain / www.ujaen.es

The history of the University of Jaén goes back to the Modern Age, with the University of Baeza, and throughout the seventeenth century, in the brief period in which the General Study of Santa Catalina was transformed into a Pontifical University.

Since then, until now, the University of Jaén has consolidated and has not only adapted to its environment, but has transformed it. It is a current and active University; with a great international projection which is strongly committed to society and its environment.

The UJA tema is interdisciplinary: Social Work and Social Services, Nursery and Psychology areas of knowledge.

We base our fieldwork in the rural context, studying the territorial inequality of access to social/health services. We put the spotlight in the high level of inequalities of training level, the rates of unemployment, the high impact of economic crisis on domestic economies and public services, or the high percent of elderly people without familiar networks, between others.

We focus mainly in seasonal workers (national and foreign migrants in olives recollection campaign) and Roma populations, the highest ethnic group in our region.

Since 1999, when the Alto Guadalquivir Hospital Public Company was created under the Ministry of Health of the Junta de Andalucía, the organization has experienced a vertiginous growth due to the adscription of the centers that currently manages, seven in the provinces of Jaén and Córdoba.

Our mission is to guarantee a continuous, comprehensive, personalized and quality health care to people who need and / or demand health care from each of the centers of the Alto Guadalquivir Health Agency.

According to the United Nations Organization, Gender Violence causes so many deaths and handicaps in women of childbearing age as cancer; and more than traffic accidents and malaria together.

The frequency of the mistreatment supposes a socio-sanitary problem of enormous transcendancy by the damage and the extension that produces in the women, so much physical as psychically, and the long-term sequels.

From the emergency services, and more specifically from the RAC consultations, a crucial role can be played to help women who suffer violence. Since it is a health problem, our organization is totally involved in working on gender violence.

Work package 1

UNIPA and ISMU, with the contribution of all partners and stakeholders, will elaborate a study on the practices adopted by operators of different sectors (hospitals, police, shelters, migrant/refugee reception centres, etc.), when dealing with migrant and refugee/asylum seekers - women, men and sexual minorities (LGBT), children and elders - who have been victims of violence and/or abuse.

The study has the purpose to investigate common, good and bad practices from all over countries: each partner for the portion of the national territory of its competence (UNIPA, ISMU, Telefono Donna, Oxfam for Italy; Samu International for France; and Jaén University for Spain) and will return a report. They will use the analysis of several performance indicators identified in Activity 1 with respect to the ability of existing services to target and take charge of women users victims of violence.

The study will also include a collection of Best Practices adopted in different sectors when dealing with refugee/asylum seekers victims of violence.

Meetings and events

Meeting in Palermo

In March of this year 2018, the components of the different partners of the PROVIDE project met in a first meeting in Palermo (Italy) to make themselves known and to specify the work groups that would be carried out during the first months of the project.

This meeting, in addition to being a first contact between the participants, served as a starting point to establish what would be the key steps and the first activities to be carried out by each of the partners.

In addition, at the meeting in Palermo, the final design of the PROVIDE project logo was finalized, as well as the corporate image that should be used in each and every one of the communications that took place as of this moment.

Next meeting: Jaén, 6-7th September 2018

During the next months, the components of PROVIDE project will carry out other meetings in which to continue specifying and analyzing the following points of work. The next meeting will take place in Jaén (Spain) on September 6th and 7th, 2018.

In this meeting, the PROVIDE groups will present the final reports of the research activities carried out; mainly, the interviews about good and bad practices.

Research will also be presented regarding the legal instruments, statistical data and other sociological studies identified for the purposes of the investigation.

Finally, the dissemination tools will be presented, such as the newsletter made by the Spanish team and the website carried out by the Sicilian team.
