THE DUTIES WE HAVE TOWARDS OTHERS

Norman Rockwell, Norman Rockwell Museum (Stockwell - Massachusetts), 1943

Is living in luxury while strangers are struggling to survive a serious moral wrong? How large is the circle of the people we should care about? In this event the answers of both common-sense and moral theories will be analysed in order to answer these questions. Hopefully, we will achieve an equilibrium among our moral judgments over the latitude of altruism, but we cannot take this result for granted.
