Description

The Master Course (LM) in "Migration, Rights, Integration" provides training on global human mobility in various dimensions. The different teachings frame the migration phenomenon in a complex historical and geopolitical setting, providing a critical knowledge on norms and policies about asylum, migration, and social inclusion on European and international scales.

A solid practical vocation complements the theoretical preparation through internships, workshops, and participatory teaching.

Graduates will be able to hold positions of responsibility in the public and private sectors and NGOs, especially in international agencies and projects to support the rights of people on the move and fruitful interaction with host societies.

Venue

The MIDI Master's program is part of the Law Department of the University of Palermo. It is located in historic buildings citycenter, close to the most important monuments

Its classrooms are equipped for multimedia and innovative teaching

Most of the lectures are held in Piazza Bologni 8, Palermo

Languages

The MIDI course recognizes multilingualism as a value and considers every language of any people and place as a treasure of knowledge, worldviews and cultures

During the classes will speak in English, but we encourage helping each other to understand, not stigmatizing different accents and eventual mistakes

It is very important for the international students learning Italian. This will make their experience in Italy richer and enable them to have more opportunities in terms of friendship, studies and job.

Italian courses are offered for free and are strongly recommended

The Legal Clinic

“Migration and Rights”

Among the mandatory teachings is Clinical Legal Education. Students will get to learn by doing by participating in the legal clinic: they will give free legal support to migrant people with the support of specialized tutors.

The Migrations and Rights Legal Clinic (MiDi) at the University of Palermo was created from the agreement between the Department of Law of the University of Palermo, the PhD in “Human Rights: Evolution, Protection and Limits” and the CLEDU Association.

It is a live client clinic, with a legal advice and guidance desk within which students together with tutors meet directly with people who need assistance every Wednesday afternoon.

The tutors are lawyers, lecturers and legal practitioners with experience in the field of immigration law.

The legal services offered are free of charge, aimed at meeting the needs of protection and access to rights of individuals and groups marginalized or made vulnerable and aimed primarily at migrant persons, in the areas of protection international, regularization of legal status and access to rights fundamentals.

Studying abroad

- Erasmus
- Forthem
- Dual degree agreements with
 - the University of Daloa, Ivory Coast
 - the University of Nottingham,
 - the Université UCBukavu, République Démocratique du Congo

Graduation

A research thesis must be written to graduate. The student must choose a supervisor in good time. The professor will support him or her in the course of research and writing. Upon completion, the student must defend his/her work in a final discussion before a committee of faculty members.

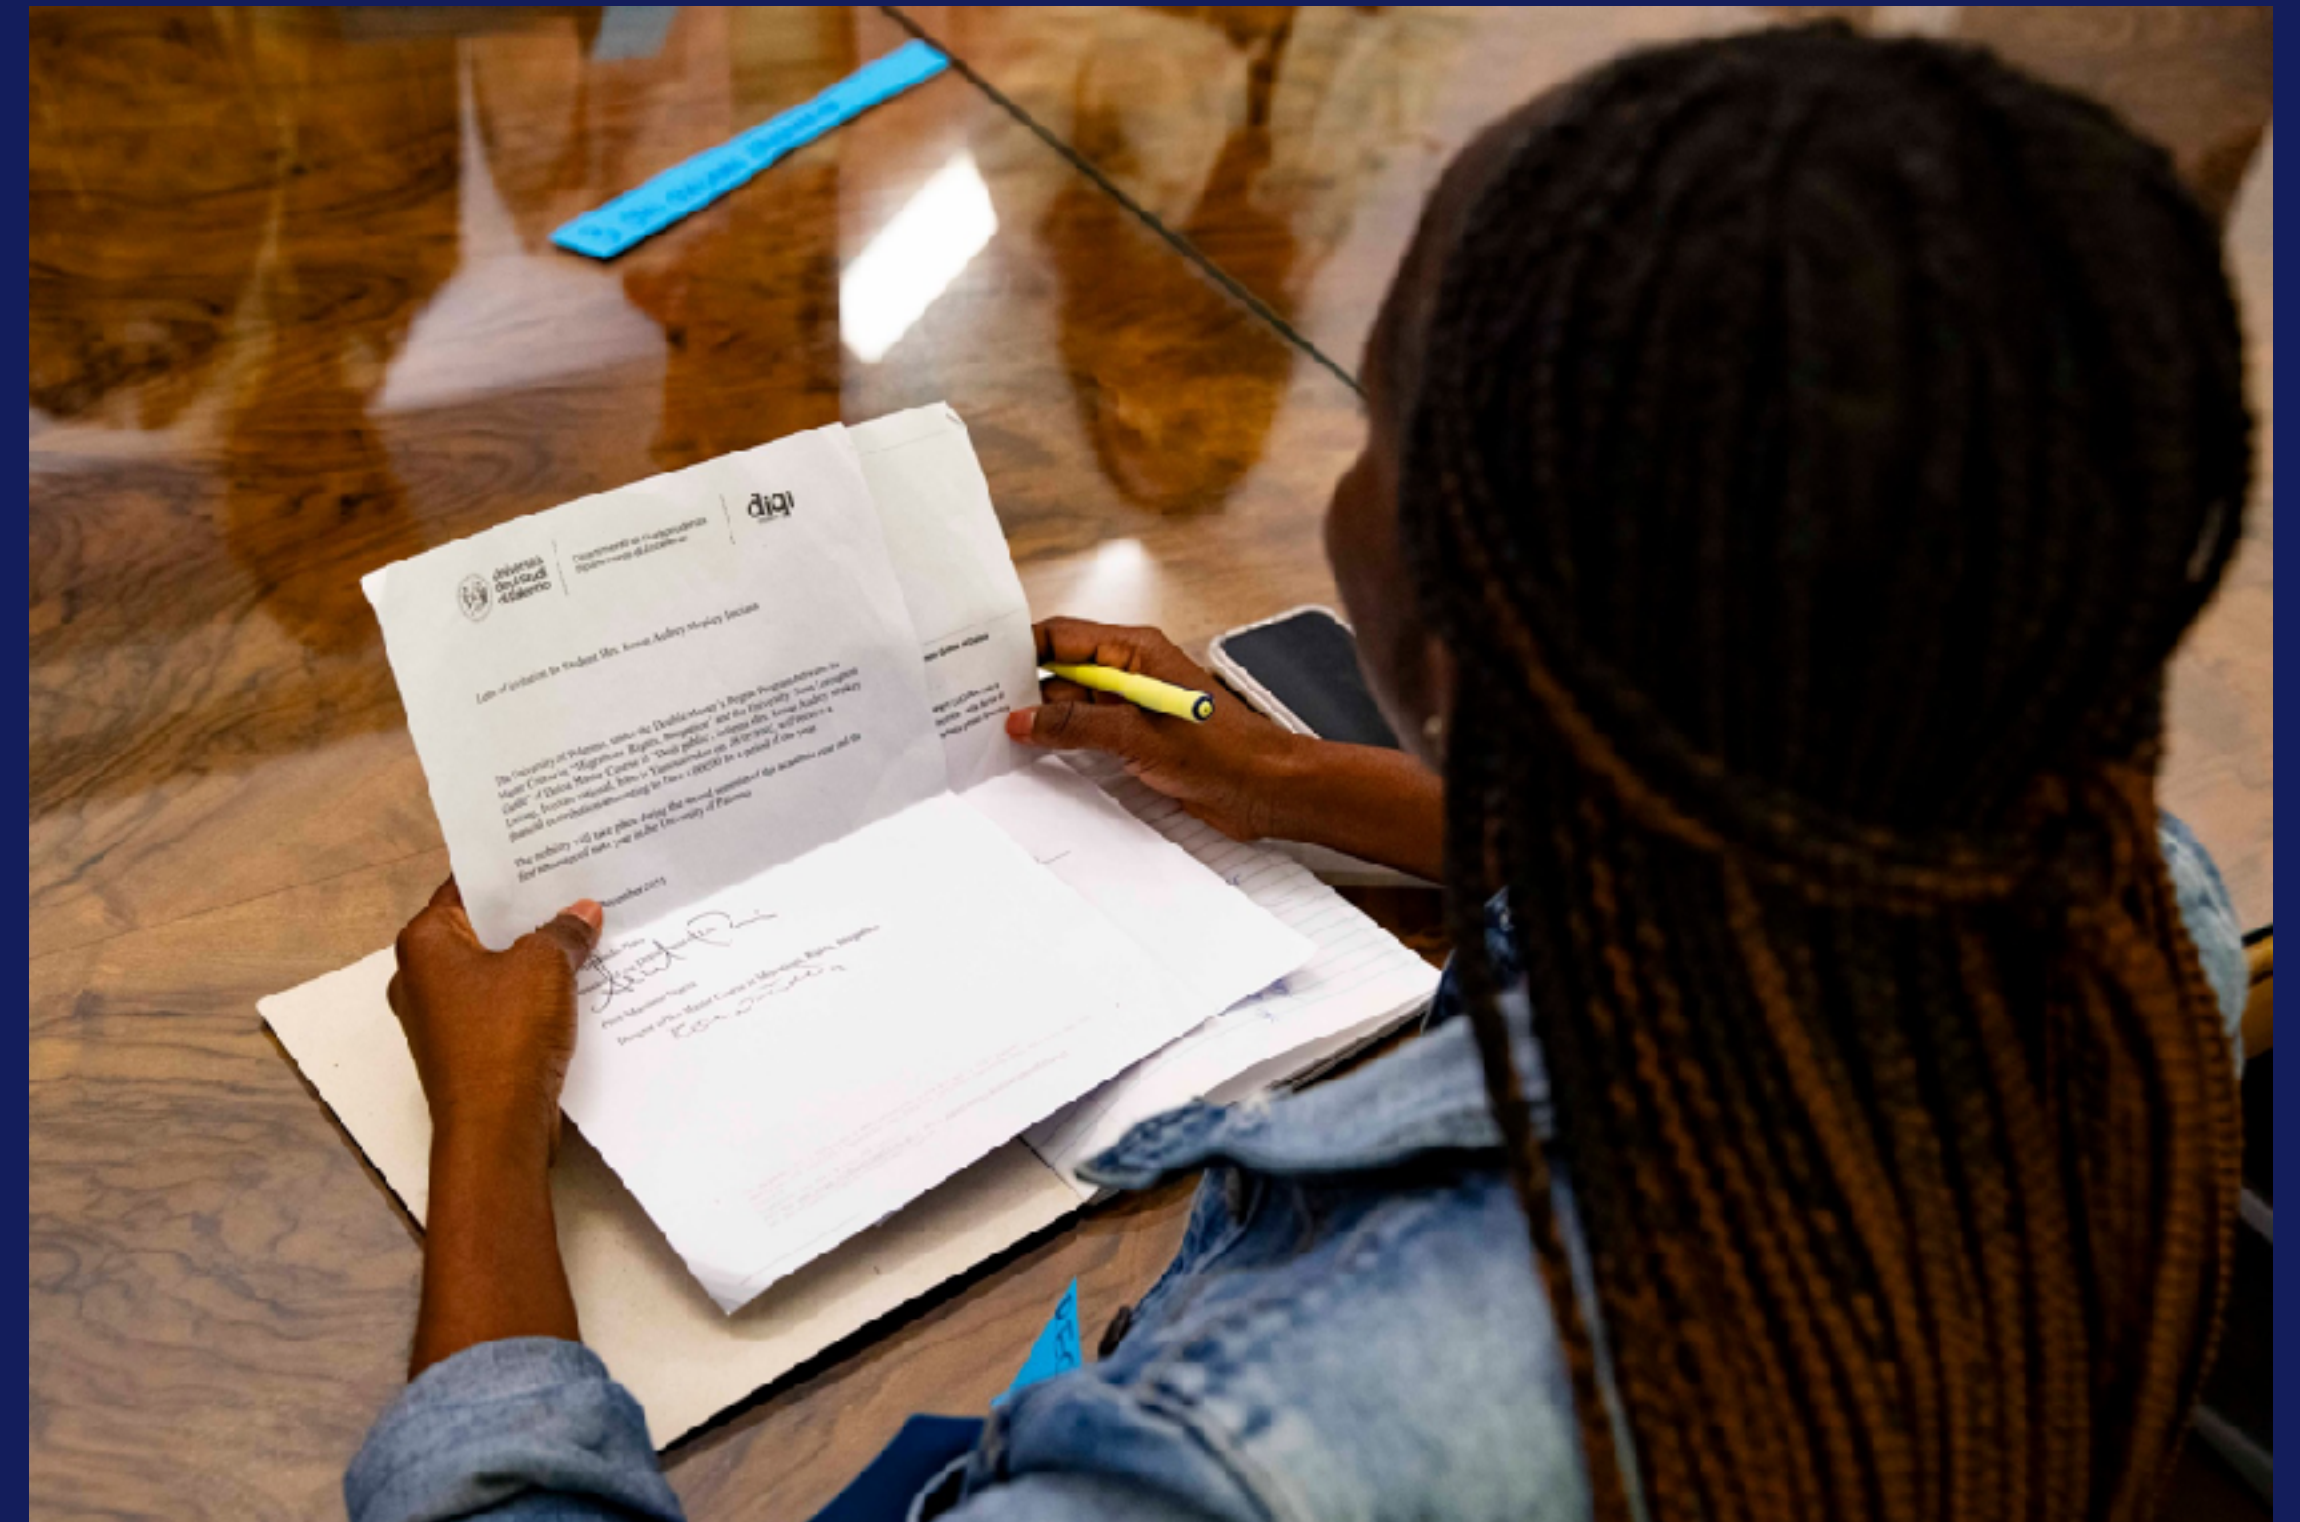

Job opportunities

The graduate can perform coordination and management functions in the field of migrant reception, inclusion and participation. He or she can help define, design and implement multilevel human mobility policies in the public sector, such as in national, European and international agencies or in committees and authorities for the protection of the fundamental rights of people on the move.

The graduate can also be a key figure in the private social sector, such as in NGOs, foundations, social enterprises, and law firms with an interest in migration, asylum, and human rights law.

The course also has a strong focus on training research skills for continuation in academia.

The course offers a range of internships related to job prospects and organizes an annual outbound orientation event involving entities and agencies where graduates could find employment.
