

My career has been focused in the field of public law, specialized in public policy, mine policy, and agrarian and environmental law. Because of this, I have been working actively as a policymaker of rural development of my country Colombia. I am a lawyer, I did a specialization in human rights and conciliation, I did a master in public law at the Externado University (Colombia), and a master in environmental law at the Palermo University (Italy). Nowadays, I am working as a consultant in the Rural Development Management at the Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Development in Colombia. The topics I work with are related to legislative issues, land restitution, legalization of the property, and the responsibilities and tracking down the public policies of displaced population in Colombia. I participated directly in the new law of land and rural development, the irrigation systems and the rural women law.

As an academic, I have been working at the Católica University (Colombia) in public law in the courses of constitution law, administrative law, and human rights.
