

PhD School at University of Palermo

Valeria Vetri

Chair of the Promotion and Innovation Committee- Coordinator of PhD program in "Technologies and sciences for human health"

- The University of Palermo as a prominent public research institution in Sicily, Italy, with a rich history dating back to 1806. Today, it serves over 48,000 students across 16 departments, offering a diverse array of academic programs, including 31 PhD courses

PhD courses cover a broad spectrum of disciplines including sciences, humanities, architecture, engineering, medicine, law, political sciences, economics, management, and languages.

PhD School at University of Palermo

A vibrant, inclusive community fostering intellectual exchange among scholars across disciplines and career stages

- Coordinates interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary activities
- Enhances research competitiveness through partnerships with national and international institutions and enterprises
- Strengthens the connection between the academic research and the surrounding Sicilian community

Fosters international collaborations

How it works?

Activities

Career day

Inspiration day

Interdisciplinary lecture series:

How to communicate research

Research funding recruitment

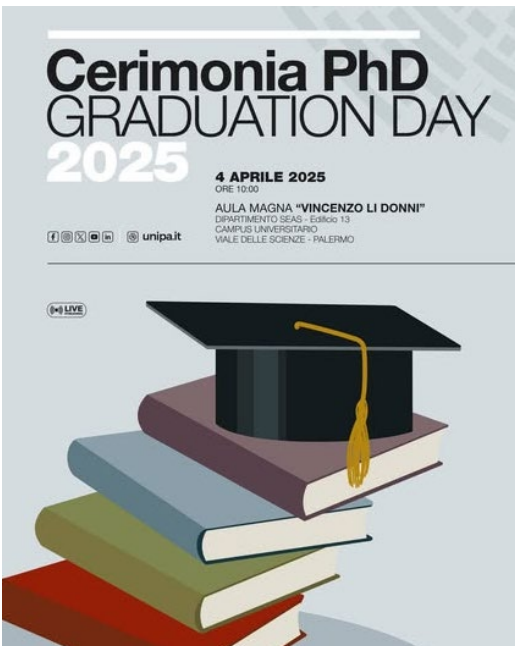

Ethics

Being a PhD

Robotics

AI

How to publish research

PhD students

International research
Partners

Reference committee

Social and economics bodies
Industries
Quality control

EU

PhD School Council

Director
Coordinators of the degree programmes
Doctoral candidates representative

Improvement
Actions