Description

The FORTHEM Staff week is a five-day workshop on the topic "European perspectives on leadership in higher education". The aim is to offer space and input for exchange about good leadership at universities in the FORTHEM alliance and beyond for executive staff and personnel development staff (HRD).

Is there an European perspective on leadership in higher education? What about organisational impacts on leadership, what do universities expect from their executive staff and from their personnel development programs? How can HRD support good leadership?

These questions will guide the FORTHEM staff week with input and discussion sessions, exchange formats, peer consultation, job shadowing and methodical workshops.

Intended Outcomes

During the workshop, participants will strengthen their leadership skills as well as their methodological competencies. Through group work in international groups from different universities, participants will be able to exchange their experiences and skills and develop a mutual understanding of leadership in higher education.

Content

The event includes five days of workshops (27 hours in total) and group dinners, as well as other extracurricular activities (like a city tour and a wine tasting, which need to be covered by own expenses).
